

Stilton Literary Agency

Brain Bugs

Original title: Tankevirus
Publisher: Gyldendal 2012
Non Fiction / Informative
Full English ms. available

Did you know that every day 95 per cent of us experience thoughts of depression, anxiety, or compulsion? Why then are not 95 per cent of us psychiatric patients? The answer is simple: Everyone has crazy thoughts, but not everyone believes in them. «Brain Bugs» is about those crazy thoughts. And specifically about how we can reveal them, when they try to pose as believable.

Not long ago it was a common assumption that people with mental illnesses were different from «normal» people. Recent research shows that the same brain bugs affect all of us -- just to varying degrees.

«Brain Bugs» is written in a language free of complex scientific jargon and vocabulary.

«Brain Bugs» uses funny and familiar examples from daily life to replace our sense of worry with curiosity in relation to mental health.

Foreign rights

Alpina (Russia)
Gütersloher Verlagshaus München, Random House (Germany)
Dansk Psykologisk Forlag (Denmark)

Hanne H. Brorson

Educated as a clinical psychologist at the University of Oslo (2002-2008)

Worked with psychosis treatment (2008-2010), and addiction treatment at Oslo University Hospital (2010-2011).

Currently a PhD student and a member of the clinical psychology research group,

Department of Psychology, University of Oslo.