

Stilton Literary Agency

In times of thieves

Original title: I tyvenes tid
Publisher: Kagge Forlag 2009
Fiction / Thriller

Anders Alme is the star broker at Barentz Securities, a brokerage house in Oslo. One day, Alme gets a visit from two Icelanders. They want him to find investment capital for a gilt-edged prospect on Greenland. A mining company called Greenland Minerals has found a huge quantity of uranium and of so called rare earth minerals in an obscure area on Greenland. In order to start the mining production, they need 250 million Euros, and they want Anders Alme to find the money.

Anders immediately sees the potential of the prospect and involves his friend Lars Lande, one of sharpest business journalists in Norway. Anders wants Lars to join him and invest a million Euros of their private savings in Greenland Minerals with a prospect of a return on investment of 25 million Euros. In other words, Anders wants his friend to take the risk so they both may end up stinking rich. Lars is tempted and is persuaded by Anders to travel to Cyprus and open a nominee company.

Soon they are both caught in trouble well above their wallets. Lars is contacted by an anonymous source, "Deep throat". He informs Lars on shady business in Norway's oil fund. Lars gets on the trail of the fund's secret connections with the Russian mafia. "Deep throat" leads Lars Lande to Moscow and later to Greenland. It soon turns nasty.

I tyvenes tid is a thriller in the fast lane. It has a narrative voice with a sparkling wit, a highly convincing plot and describes the extravagant ambiance of the rich Norwegian financial elite with stinging accuracy.

I tyvenes tid is the first of three books about Anders Alme and Lars Lande. The two next volumes can be read as separate thrillers, but also as a continuing story. The

Odd Harald Hauge

Odd Harald Hauge is an adventurer, an entrepreneur and an author. He has worked as a business journalist and as chief editor for business at Aftenposten. Hauge has also been a stockbroker. In 1996 he founded Nettavisen, one of the world's first "internet only" newspapers. Hauge has started many companies, both as investor and entrepreneur.

Hauge has published several non-fiction books, two of them on moguls within shipping, Fred. Olsen and John Fredriksen. Hauge has also written books based on his many adventures and expeditions to The South Pole, Mount Everest and the crossing of Greenland.

He lives in Oslo with his wife Kristin. Whenever he finds free time, he offers guiding into the icy wilderness of Spitsbergen, a gift for anyone attracted to extreme adventures.

Other titles

The Novaja Semlja Effect (2023)
Great Bear (2019)
Polar Tragedies (2019)
Everest (2016)
Paranoia (2012)
The Liars (2011)

Stilton Literary Agency

second volume will be published in Norway spring 2011. A revised manuscript will be available from Stilton Literary Agency by September 2010. The third and final volume will have a revised manuscript available by late spring 2012, for publication in Norway the same year.